The Palestinian Authority (PA) leadership, the media and structures they control present terrorists as heroes. Summer camps and sporting events are named after them, turning them into role models. Leaders honoring terrorists include Palestinian Authority Prime Minister Salam Fayyad, who honored 4 female terrorists including two who drove suicide bombers to their attacks, Chairman Mahmoud Abbas, PA ministers and officials. PA TV, which is under the control of the office of Abbas, regularly honors terrorists in its broadcasts. Yasser Abd Rabbo, the Inspector General of the PA's official media, defined the Palestinian media, including Palestinian television as "a governmental institution." He stated that the PA plans to create an independent media in the future so "that the TV will not be the mouthpiece of the government, with an attempt to dictate to society and to direct it as the government sees fit." [Al-Hayat Al-Jadida, May 15, 2010] This has not occurred yet, and today PA TV continues to be the mouthpiece of the government.

These actions show that the PA has not complied with the fundamental, preliminary requirement of the peace process, which is to stop promotion of violence.

The following are some examples of PA terrorist glorification by leaders and government-controlled media in 2011:

1. PA TV praises terrorist who planned Passover suicide bombing that killed 30 "Heroic fighter, the lion of the prison cells"

Following the release of 1,027 Palestinian prisoners from Israeli prisons in exchange for Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit, official Palestinian Authority TV chose to dedicate a broadcast to one terrorist, Abbas Al-Sayid, who was not included in the deal. Abbas Al-Sayid is serving 35 life sentences and 150 years for planning a suicide bombing in Netanya in 2002 at a Passover Seder in which 30 Israelis were killed, and another bombing in 2001 in which 5 were killed and 100 wounded.

PA TV's visit to the home of Abbas Al-Sayid:

PA TV host: "We are outside the home of the patient, heroic fighter who is resolute, overcoming his chains, desiring freedom - Abbas Al-Sayid, the lion of the prison cells."

PA TV host interviews released prisoner in the house of Al-Sayid:

Host: "[What is] your feeling now in the home of Abbas Al-Sayid - the leader, hero, defeater of the enemies, defeater of the dungeons, and lion under interrogation?"

Released female terrorist, Du'a Al-Jayousi (sentenced to 3 life sentences for leading a suicide bomber to his attack in Netanya in 2002 in which 3 Israelis were killed): "He was an example and role model for us, we wanted very much to meet him."

Released male terrorist, Muayyad Al-Jallad: "I do not forget our neighbor and brother, Abbas Al-Sayid. He is the crown on our heads. Allah willing, we will soon rejoice for him over his release... He is honor to the nation... We are all familiar with his manly qualities of heroism and strength." [PA TV (Fatah), Oct. 25, 2011]

2. PA Minister of Prisoners' Affairs, Issa Karake, praises terrorist murderers as "Palestinian Authority symbols" and "heroes and fighters":

"There is... much questioning among the prisoners following the release, following the exchange deal, and especially the non-inclusion of Palestinian Authority symbols and prisoner symbols, such as Marwan Barghouti, Ahmad Sa'adat, Abdallah Barghouti, Abbas Al-Sayid, and others... and Sami Younis and Karim Younis, and other heroes and fighters." [PA TV (Fatah), Oct. 17, 2011]

In a widely publicized event, the PA had Latifa Abu Hmeid lead the procession to the UN offices in Ramallah and she was the one who handed the letter for the UN Secretary General Ban Ki Moon. In total her sons are serving 18 life sentences for murder of Israelis.
